

Inter-Club Junior Player Permit

Guidelines

Inter-Club Player permits are designed to allow:

1. Talented junior players to further develop their skills by playing senior hockey at another club that can provide higher senior competition and/or coaching.
2. Allow juniors to play junior hockey when their home club cannot field a team in their age bracket.

They are also designed to retain junior players in their home club whilst allowing them to play for their peers.

- A junior player who cannot play junior hockey with their current club may play in a junior team for another club whilst playing senior hockey for their current club.
- A junior player in their current club may play in a senior team for another club if their current club does not have a senior team for them to play in.
- The player may play at any senior level in the nominated club for the duration of the season.
- A trial period of four weeks for both parties be provided enabling either party to withdraw from the contract.
- Arrangements should be made between clubs in relation to affiliation fees so as not to disadvantage players financially.
- Permit takes effect when received by the office.
